

Bulletin Board Ideas

Develop a list of five bulletin board titles along with short descriptions and objective(s) for the bulletin board, how it relates to the theories of development, and the development of individuals. The following bulletin board example is for a high school course – Child Development. On the back of these handouts, draft or drawing of each bulletin board idea.

| Bulletin board title | Description and objective(s) of bulletin board | How does it relate to the theories of development? | Physical, Emotional, Social or Cognitive Development of Children |
|--|--|---|--|
| Developmental Motor Skills of Children from Birth to Age Three | Place pictures of children from birth to age three with a description of their motor skills at each particular stage. Students will understand that growth and development are gradual, continuous and constant. | In both physical and mental development, children go through a sequence of stages that can be predicted. These are called developmental stages. | Physical development |
| | | | |
| | | | |

Name _____ Period _____ Date _____

| Bulletin board title | Description and objective(s) of bulletin board | How does it relate to the theories of development? | Physical, Emotional, Social or Cognitive Development of Children |
|-----------------------------|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

1. Which bulletin board idea is your favorite? Why?